SPIRITUAL CARE NEAR THE END OF LIFE

Rabbis, chaplains, and social workers are often called on to provide spiritual care near life's end. Whether in response to serious illness, advanced cognitive or physical decline in older age, or unexpected, tragic violence, health care professionals and clergy need to respond compassionately and effectively with families facing spiritual, religious, and existential crisis. Leading clergy, chaplains, and social workers will offer their knowledge, skills, and wisdom to assist professionals seeking to better integrate spiritual care into their professional and community work.
